

As I stood out of the darkness of the gloomy cave, the bright sun spread across the beautiful landscape. I began to feel it's warm breeze. I could see some delicate, purple flowers spreading across a field of green grass. I heard some woolly mammoths lumbering past and I couldn't believe my eyes! I could smell the moss across the mountains and rocks that's emerald green.

I could feel the sun warming my skin and the gentle breeze floating past like a river flowing that's warm in the sunset.

As I stand looking out towards the horizon and the rising sun I think about the quest ahead of me. My brown, green eyes sparkle like emeralds in the sun. I stand up from my long journey I feel brave and I start to feel more and more brave as the hours go on. My short, brown, curly hair moved in the gentle breeze like a flowing river. I'm going to need all my courage on this quest. Luckily, I'm very strong, brave, clever, stealthy and a very good problem solver although I am not very keen on bees and wasps.

As I looked around surrounding my village with Ruby by my side a shiver ran down my spine. I anxiously whispered to Ruby, "This is terrible we will starve and die." Ruby replied, "We have no water, no food and no firewood what are we going to do?" I could tell Ruby was worried and I quickly told her my plan.

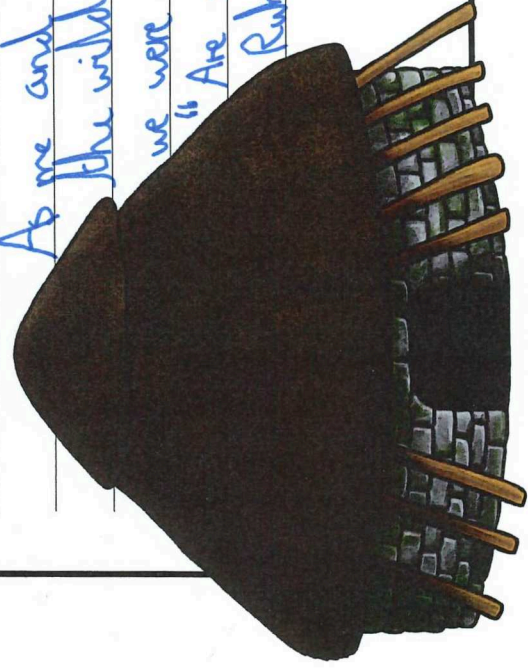

"But I could be alone and I might die!" Ruby exclaimed worriedly. I quickly assured her that I would be with her and she would be my companion.

"Just one thing, what are we going on a quest for, I forget." Ruby announced. I quickly exclaimed, "Firewood, berries and water from the wild wood so let's go!"

"Let's quickly get our horses to ride on, to make it quicker."

As we and Ruby traveled through the wild wood in light and dark we were ever so tired.

"Are we nearly there yet?" Ruby curiously asked, every
